FEEDBACK ON PROPOSED CAT LAW

The Shire of Pingelly is considering making a new Cat Local Law. Adjacent local governments including the Shires of Cuballing, Narrogin and Boddington have made a local law which has effect within their local government area. It is estimated that feral cats kill 748 reptiles, birds and mammals on average a year, while pet cats kill approximately 186 of these animals each year. Australia-wide, cats have played a major role in the extinction of at least 27 mammal species and at present endanger 147 Australian mammals, birds, reptiles and frogs.

These local laws combined with feral cat control have demonstrated an impact, e.g. numbat numbers within Dryandra National Park have rebounded in recent years. However, it is estimated that there are fewer than 1,000 numbats left in the wild.

Before formally commencing the process to make a Cat Local Law, the Shire of Pingelly is seeking your input to draft the law. The initial draft proposes the following:

- Cats not to create a nuisance.
- Prohibit cats from bushland areas greater than 5,000m² – whether private property or reserve land.
- Restrict the number of cats to 2 per property with approval available for an additional 2 cats if appropriate.

For more information regarding the proposed Cat Local Law, please see the Shire's website.
